

AIR ARGOSY PUSHES NOSE OVER OCEAN

CLEARING SKY BRINGS HOPE TO HOMELESS

Hundreds in Poverty and Desolation Following Flood in Southwest.

DALLAS, Texas, May 20—Clearing skies today brought hope of hundreds of homeless lowland residents as turgid flood waters in northern and central Texas and northern Louisiana coiled their way slowly southward toward the Gulf of Mexico.

Cessation of rains over the affected areas during the past 23 hours brought slight recessions of flooded rivers although countless acres of fertile bottom remained under high waters today.

Marion, Co., drained by the Big Cypress, Little Cypress and Black Cypress rivers, continued to bear the brunt of the high waters. Jefferson, county seat of Marion, Co., at the confluence of the Black Cypress and Little Cypress, was almost completely submerged.

RELIEFS ACTIVE

Many farm families from the surrounding territory, driven from their homes by the high waters, were in the city, being cared for by relief agencies and city authorities.

The Red River, its flood crests moving through Central Louisiana today, still held thousands of acres water-logged under back waters in the northeastern corner of Texas and the northwestern corner of Louisiana.

Rail and highway traffic, demoralized for 48 hours following the storms of last weekend, was being restored in Bowie, Harrison and Cady counties where the Red River was on a rampage. Bridges have been rebuilt and highways cleared.

Improved conditions were also reported in Central Texas where the Trinity, Brazos, Colorado, and Guadalupe Rivers have cut paths over vast acres of lowlands, sending residents to higher land and causing extensive damage to property and crops.

The rivers have begun falling and in the upper regions were within their banks for the first time in nearly 10 days.

LAND SUBMERGED

Many sections along the southern course of the streams remained submerged, however, as floodcrests moved southward.

All danger at East Waco, where the high wall of flood waters of the Brazos have threatened for three days to break through levees, appeared over today, with the stream receding slightly. The dykes have been strengthened and patrolled for several days.

The high crest on the Trinity river held coastal plains under high waters today with bottom lands inundated from Dallas to below Trinidad.

DRY AGENTS SPREAD NETS

Ensnare Five in New Straitsville—Continue Raids To Dry Up Southern Ohio

COLUMBUS, O., May 20—Intent upon "drying up" central southern Ohio, federal prohibition agents today had spread the same net which entrapped 34 men and women at Newark last week and ensnared four men and one woman at New Straitsville, besides causing three more arrests at Newark and the issuance of warrants against the trustees of the Eagles and Druids club-houses in that Lucking-co city.

New Straitsville, which is often referred to as "the wettest spot in Ohio," was visited by the dry agents late yesterday and four men and one woman were arrested. No liquor was seized, the dry agents said, the victims being taken into custody on previous violations.

Those arrested there were Barthe Ross, 40, Frank Saubeamer, 37, Samuel Ambrose, 38, Theodore Wilson, 39, and Fred Newman, 38. All were charged with the possession of liquor and maintaining a nuisance.

Meanwhile, prohibition officers caused the arrest of Rufus Jones, safety director of Newark, on a charge of obstructing a federal officer. The alleged offense is said to have occurred when dry agents made raids there Friday. Jones has been released on $1,000 bond after pleading not guilty.

Two other Newark men were also arrested as the result of the raids there last week when 34 persons were taken into custody. The latest victims are Clyde Woolles, 26, and Minor Johnson, 36.

Federal authorities issued warrants against the trustees of the Eagles and Druids homes in Newark. Frank Catt, George Hanger, Harry Ballinger, Carlos Riley and Alfred Teuscher are said to be trustees of the Eagles lodge. Vincent Boggs, Joseph Wieder and Harry Nicholson are the trustees of the Newark Druids.

All are to be arranged in federal court here Thursday.

Citizens Learn Waterway Plan

C. E. Gioce, James I. Smith, A. Moore, E. E. Barrere, George P. Fossman and Karl J. Herrmann attended the meeting at the Southern Hotel in Columbus Monday evening to hear the discussion concerning the proposed Ohio river to Lake Erie canal which is under consideration by the federal government.

The movement if successful, would make central Ohio a center of the iron and steel industry. The association will work with the Great Lakes and Ohio River Waterways Association in promoting the proposed inland waterway from Portsmouth on the Ohio river to Sandusky on Lake Erie.

Cost of the project was estimated at $125,000,000. Professor C. E. Sherman, head of the department of civil engineering at Ohio State University, who has made a study of the route, outlined the project. By building a 30-foot dam on the Scioto river about five miles south of Delaware, he said, and another 50-foot dam at Upper Sandusky on the Sandusky river, a summit level lake would be formed, 40 miles long and one mile wide, with a 10-mile canal between the two rivers near Marion, O., the only artificial link in the chain. Approximately 30 locks on the two rivers would be necessary for navigation, Professor Sherman estimated.

The proposed waterway is the most direct route between two of the greatest mineral deposits in the United States, the coal fields of West Virginia and the ore deposits around the Great Lakes. Speakers emphasized.

Henry A. Williams, president of the Great Lakes and Ohio River Waterways Association and Vaughn A. Talbot, secretary of the association and secretary of the Portsmouth Chamber of Commerce, addressed the meeting.

W. A. Rubrecht, president of the Columbus Council of Civic Associations, temporary chairman, appointed a committee of five to make plans for a permanent organization. Another meeting, open to the public, will be held at the Southern Friday evening to elect officers and lay plans for a campaign in behalf of the waterway.

JAMES CANNON IS EXONERATED

Episcopacy Votes 54 to 11 For Acquittal on Stock Market Speculation.

DALLAS, Tex., May 20—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., stood exonerated today of charges of stock market speculation following a vote of 54 to 11 returned last night by the Episcopacy committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The committee voted Cannon's exoneration only after he stated that he was "sorry he had caused the church any embarrassment."

Bishop Cannon also promised the committee that he never would again trade in margins on the stock market.

Charges of stock market gambling were brought against the Bishop last week by twenty-one laymen of the church, headed by Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy.

The committee gave its endorsement last night to Bishop Cannon's chairmanship of the church temperance board although former secretary of the navy Daniels opposed it.

The temperance committee, in a report presented to the general church conference yesterday, opposed modification of the eighteenth amendment.

Miss Anna Sample of Ashville visited Circleville Monday.

MOST CHAOTIC ELECTION IN HISTORY

More Than Two and One-half Million Vote—Cast Ballots Today

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
PHILADELPHIA, May 20—In a fog of uncertainty, suspicion and Republican factional bitterness Pennsylvania marched to the polls today to settle by ballots the most chaotic primary in the state's history.

More than 3,500,000 Pennsylvanians are entitled to vote. Probably 2,500,000 of them will exercise the privilege. They will decide whether "Uncle Joe" Grundy or James J. Davis or Francis H. Bohnen gets the Republican Senatorial nomination; and whether Gifford Pinchot or Francis Shunk Brown or Thomas W. Phillips wins the gubernatorial nomination.

The Democrats have an unopposed slate headed by Sedgwick Kistler, wealthy manufacturer, for senator, and James M. Hemphill for governor, so the fighting and bitterness is all on the Republican side. The Republicans have enough of it however, for two parties.

The actual balloting began under the watchful eyes of a small army of poll watchers, under cover agents, and hired gumshoe men representing all the Republican candidates and the United States Senate as well. Their presence attested to the extreme bitterness of this factional row, and the wide open charges of fraudulent plots, trading, dealing, intimidation, coercion and general political skulduggery. Mud has been indiscriminately thrown in this campaign by all concerned, and it is considered likely that whoever wins will have to convince a senate committee that everything was aboveboard.

The injection of the wet-and-dry issue into the battle, in the most virulent form imaginable, has knocked all the predictions and forecasts galley west. The most seasoned of Keystone political prophets privately confess themselves stumped as the outcome.

The wets are represented by the Phillips-Bohlen ticket. This ticket was entered only after Pinchot and Grundy had declared themselves dry, and after the Davis-Brown ticket had declined to take a positive stand one way or another on the issue.

LEAGUE BOYS SEE AIRPLANES LAND

After the boys had been shown around the entire grounds, Mr. Brehmer was their host to a chicken dinner in the administration dining room.

The boys who made the trip were: George and William Ammer, James Reichelderfer, Lincoln and Otis Mader, Tom Kirwin, Horace Gilmore, Bob Wilson and Harold Dresbach.

GRAF ZEPPELIN IS BOUND FOR BRAZIL COAST

Four Women Aboard Ship—Next Stop is 3,500 Miles From Starting Point

BULLETIN

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, May 20—Bound on a commercial aerial argosy to the new world, the Graf Zeppelin pushed its silver nose out over the open sea at 9:27 a. m. today (5:27 a. m. eastern daylight time).

Not one among the nineteen passengers failed to register a thrill as the huge air liner crossed the coast of Spain and shot its bulk over the ocean expanse. The Graf left land behind at Chipton, one minute less than an hour after the take-off from Tabalada aerodrome, Seville.

By THOMAS A. LOAYZA
SEVILLE, May 20—Silvery and gleaming, the Graf Zeppelin rose from her mooring mast here at 8:32 a. m. (4:32 a. m. eastern standard time) and headed into the southwest bearing the world's greetings to the new.

Heavily laden with passengers and mails, the majestic airship rose easily in fair skies aided by the coolness of the morning hours away on the journey to South America and the United States.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran commander of dirigibles, was at the controls. He smiled at the crowds below and waved cheerily from the windows where so much of the world's surface has passed beneath view in his birdlike pageant.

The warm spirit of Spain that had paid tribute overnight to the dirigible, the Graf Zeppelin, was a burst of cheering at the five motors began a steady drone that would continue across the stretches of the South Atlantic Ocean, to Pernambuco, Brazil.

The nose of the famous steamer, conqueror of the North Pacific and Atlantic oceans, headed southwest on the second leg of her 16,000 mile flight with mail and passengers to South America, the United States and return to Germany.

Pernambuco, the next stop, was 3,500 miles away, and the Zeppelin would make the first crossing of the equator in transoceanic flight by an airship.

FOUR WOMEN ABOARD
There were four women and fifteen men on board the air liner.

After skirting the coast of Africa and heading to sea little land will be seen by the voyagers save for the Cape Verde Islands and a possible earlier glimpse of the Canary Islands.

Reports from the Graf's own radio transmitters and from ships sighting her at sea will be the only means of checking her progress over the many hours of cruising ahead.

The new passengers to board the Graf at Seville were: Mrs. Mary Pierce, wife of a New York stock broker; Lieutenant Colonel Emilio Herrera, of the Spanish Royal Air Force and interested in the promotion of a Zeppelin line to South America; and the Infante Alphonso D'Orleans, cousin of King Alphonso of Spain.

The Infante, a leader of the Spanish Royal Air Force and long an aviation enthusiast, told the International News Service:

"Although I have been flying for twenty years, including in Zeppelins during the war, I expect to learn a lot and I feel confident that a transatlantic service will be profitable in the near future."

Through the night, while the passengers were being feted in this lovely old Spanish city, officers and crew of the Graf were busy superintending the pumping of 16,000 litres of hydrogen into the gas compartments of the airship.

They took on board 3,000 litres of water, 10,000 litres of gasoline, and 500 litres of oil, for ballast drinking and fuel tanks.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
PHILADELPHIA, May 20—In a fog of uncertainty, suspicion and Republican factional bitterness Pennsylvania marched to the polls today to settle by ballots the most chaotic primary in the state's history.

More than 3,500,000 Pennsylvanians are entitled to vote. Probably 2,500,000 of them will exercise the privilege. They will decide whether "Uncle Joe" Grundy or James J. Davis or Francis H. Bohnen gets the Republican Senatorial nomination; and whether Gifford Pinchot or Francis Shunk Brown or Thomas W. Phillips wins the gubernatorial nomination.

The Democrats have an unopposed slate headed by Sedgwick Kistler, wealthy manufacturer, for senator, and James M. Hemphill for governor, so the fighting and bitterness is all on the Republican side. The Republicans have enough of it however, for two parties.

The actual balloting began under the watchful eyes of a small army of poll watchers, under cover agents, and hired gumshoe men representing all the Republican candidates and the United States Senate as well. Their presence attested to the extreme bitterness of this factional row, and the wide open charges of fraudulent plots, trading, dealing, intimidation, coercion and general political skulduggery. Mud has been indiscriminately thrown in this campaign by all concerned, and it is considered likely that whoever wins will have to convince a senate committee that everything was aboveboard.

The injection of the wet-and-dry issue into the battle, in the most virulent form imaginable, has knocked all the predictions and forecasts galley west. The most seasoned of Keystone political prophets privately confess themselves stumped as the outcome.

The wets are represented by the Phillips-Bohlen ticket. This ticket was entered only after Pinchot and Grundy had declared themselves dry, and after the Davis-Brown ticket had declined to take a positive stand one way or another on the issue.

LEAGUE BOYS SEE AIRPLANES LAND

Local Youths Given Treat of Trip To Port Columbus
Monday Evening.

R. L. Brehmer, advisor, and Durward W. Dowden, assistant advisor, accompanied 10 members of the Airplane Model League of America to Port Columbus Monday evening where they were privileged to see the T. A. T. planes land.

The purpose of the trip according to Mr. Brehmer was to give the boys a clearer view of "real airplanes", and also explain the mechanism of a plane, as compared with a model, with which these boys work.

After the boys had been shown around the entire grounds, Mr. Brehmer was their host to a chicken dinner in the administration dining room.

The boys who made the trip were: George and William Ammer, James Reichelderfer, Lincoln and Otis Mader, Tom Kirwin, Horace Gilmore, Bob Wilson and Harold Dresbach.

GRAF ZEPPELIN IS BOUND FOR BRAZIL COAST

Four Women Aboard Ship—
Next Stop is 3,500 Miles
From Starting Point.

BULLETIN
ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, May 20—Bound on a commercial aerial argosy to the new world, the Graf Zeppelin pushed its silver nose out over the open sea at 9:27 a. m. today (5:27 a. m. eastern daylight time).

Not one among the nineteen passengers failed to register a thrill as the huge air liner crossed the coast of Spain and shot its bulk over the ocean expanse. The Graf left land behind at Chipiona, one minute less than an hour after the take-off from Tabalada aerodrome, Seville.

By THOMAS A. LOAYZA
SEVILLE, May 20—Silvery and gleaming, the Graf Zeppelin rose from her mooring mast here at 8:32 a. m. (4:32 a. m. eastern standard time) and headed into the southwest bearing the world's greetings to the new.

Heavily laden with passengers, and mails, the majestic airship rose easily in fair skies aided by the coolness of the morning hours—away on the journey to South American and the United States.

ECKENER AT CONTROLS
Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran commander of dirigibles, was at the controls. He smiled at the crowds below and waved cheerily from the windows where so much of the world's surface has passed beneath view in his birdseye pageant.

The warm spirit of Spain that had paid tribute overnight to all those on board the Graf welled up in a burst of cheering as the Graf's five motors began a steady drone that would continue across the stretches of the South Atlantic Ocean, to Pernambuco, Brazil.

The nose of the famous airship, conqueror of the North Pacific and Atlantic oceans, headed southwest on the second leg of her 18,000 mile flight with mail and passengers to South America, the United States and return to Germany.

Pernambuco, the next stop, was 3,500 miles away, and the Zeppelin would make the first crossing of the equator in transoceanic flight by an airship.

FOUR WOMEN ABOARD

There were four women and fifteen men on board the air liner.

After skirting the coast of Africa and heading to sea little land will be seen by the voyagers save for the Cape Verde Islands and a possible earlier glimpse of the Canary Islands.

Reports from the Graf's own radio transmitters and from ships sighting her at sea will be the only means of checking her progress over the many hours of cruising ahead.

The new passengers to board the Graf at Seville were: Mrs. Mary Pierce, wife of a New York stock broker; Lieutenant Colonel Emilio Herrera, of the Spanish Royal Air Force and interested in the promotion of a Zeppelin line to South America; and the Infante Alphonso D'Orleans, cousin of King Alphonso of Spain.

The Infante, a leader of the Spanish Royal Air Force and long an aviation enthusiast, told the International News Service:

"Although I have been flying for twenty years, including in Zeppelins during the war, I expect to learn a lot and I feel confident that a transatlantic service will be profitable in the near future."

Through the night, while the passengers were being feted in this lovely old Spanish city, officers and crew of the Graf were busy superintending the pumping of 18,000 litres of hydrogen into the gas compartments of the airship.

They took on board 3,000 litres of water, 10,000 litres of gasoline, and 500 litres of oil, for ballast drinking and fuel tanks.

COCA COLAS TAKE ADVANTAGE OF FIRST INNING, WIN 14 TO 6

Eight Runs In Initial Frame Proves Margin By Which League Leaders Down Modern Woodmen In Hectic Affair—Wallace Hurls For Woodmen.

Had the first inning of the Coca-Cola-Modern Woodmen contest been erased, the scrap that occurred at Utilities field Monday evening might be called a ball game because the score would be 6-6. But inasmuch as first innings count just as much at the end of the game, and in this case more, the Cokes simply won another ball game. The score was 14-6.

Eight runs, no more, no less, trickled over the plate in the first frame, when the Modern Woodmen aggregation forgot that to put a runner out it is necessary to first catch the ball then throw it to a sack in time to beat a runner. But evidently forgetting that rule, the Woodmen aggregation handed the Cokes eight runs on a silver platter. Effort? Certainly the Cokes used effort to score their eight runs. But just enough to run around the sacks while the Woodmen were pegging to the wrong sack, or just weren't pegging at all.

Several solid hits were inserted into this hectic first inning when the Coca-Cola entrant batted around and three over.

The first three balls that were hit by Coca-Cola men were erred upon and then it was too bad.

The Cokes scored three more markers in the second frame and

TIGERS DOUBLE ON ST. LOUIS

Stanley Harris Brings Team From Cellar With Double Header Over Browns.

By COPELAND C. BURG
NEW YORK, May 20.—The baseball world doffed its cap to Bucky Harris, manager of the Detroit Tigers, today. Here is a smart manager, for, having decided he was "wearyed" of last place in the American League, he focused the spotlight on his departure from that lowly place by choosing a day when all other teams were held idle by cold and rain.

Not that anyone became much excited about it, all, except perhaps the St. Louis Browns, who dropped in to the basement as they succumbed to the Bengals in a doubleheader, 5 to 4 and 4 to 2.

In the opener Stewart held Detroit scoreless until the eighth inning, when a four run rally evened up the game. Two singles and a fielder's choice led to the winning run in the tenth when the ever-important Mr. Gehring came home. The Tigers grouped hits in the night cap and Sam Gray of the Browns dropped a pitching battle to Ansley Wyatt, as Detroit won out. Each team got ten hits.

All teams play today except St. Louis and Chicago in the National Circuit and Philadelphia and Washington in the American.

In the National League, where less than a game separates the league leading flock from the fifth place Pirates, Brooklyn plays the Phillies, and New York, hanging on the second rung, takes on Boston. Pittsburgh engages Cincinnati.

With Coombs and Ruth suffering from slight injuries, the crippled Yanks play Boston again. Louis continues its disastrous series at Chicago and St. Louis with Detroit.

SCHMELING EXPECTS TO HAVE HIMSELF FOR MANAGER SOON

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor.

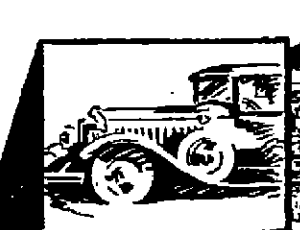

NEW YORK, May 20.—An innuendo is being bandied about today to the effect that the Herr Schmeling, co-principal of the world's heavyweight championship fight of June 12, is soon to sign up with a new manager of whom he expects the most satisfactory of results, the latter being himself. He has four or five managers now, not including the managers of the managers, but they say he will have a grand total of none by Oct. 15. It seems that the Bulow contract and the managers and their managers are to run out, meaning to expire, in unison, meaning together and in heavy marching order.

In other words, the Herr Jacobs, who learned his German while buying Gefultessche down at the corner delicatessen, may or may not get a lot of prairie in the none too intermediate future. I am not altogether clear on this point but my information about another phase of the situation is almost specific. I know perfectly well what he will not get. He will not get a license to manage Schmeling on the night of the title fight with Sharkey.

He will go into the German's corner on the bounty of a special permit, good for one evening only, after which he will be permitted to go out into the night and get sunstroke or something.

VETS ENTERED IN DECORATION DAY CONTESTS

Earl Cooper, Real Veteran, Racing In 1912, To Be Behind Wheel In Race.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.— There will be many strands of gray hair hidden by the stream lined helmets of the drivers who start the Indianapolis 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

Old timers of other years, long since retired to the Valhalla of race drivers—a seat on the pit wall—have begun to anoint their creaking joints with snake oil and other limbering liniments so that they will be mobile for the coming contest.

The reason is the return of the two man racing mounts, abolished with the 1922 race here and causing the retirement of many of the stars of that day who contended that they could not ride at high speed without a mechanic sitting beside them to signal events happening behind them.

When the Speedway management announced the change in rules for the coming contest, replacing the one man kiddie cars of the past few years for the more substantial two man mounts, the veterans began to stir in the warmth of the calcium glare cast upon them as sports writers began to compare the coming event with the last years of the two man jobs.

Earl Cooper, one of the real veterans, a contestant at Indianapolis as early as 1912, who retired a few years ago and then came back to place second in the Indianapolis event in 1924 missing victory by a tire change in the waning laps, and who has since retired again, is feeling the urge in his bones to drive again this year.

"You know it's in my mind," laughed Cooper on a visit here this week, "when I have begun to dream about the race during my nightly sleeps. The other night I dreamed that I was driving in the race with Tommy Milton besides me as riding mechanic."

Milton, speed fans will recall, is the only two time winner of the 500-mile race who also retired after thirteen consecutive years as a speed star.

"Milton and I were riding the load car," continued Cooper, "but we were developing a heap of mechanical trouble. Still, in my happy dream, no other team was able to pass us. I awakened before the finish of the race but the dream was a complete success because we were in front before it ended."

Cooper is not seriously considering starting a mount for the coming contest. But there is a likelihood that he will be there as a relief driver. Peter De Paolo, who is now superintending the building of his car at the Duesenberg plant has suggested that Cooper prepare to relieve him, if necessary, in the tiring miles of the May run. "It would be a great consolation to have you in the pit, ready to take the car out in case I became too tired to go on," is the way De Paolo explained the situation to Cooper. But Earl would make no promises. He merely smiled quietly, suggesting an affirmative answer, but not expressing it.

"There will be a lot of us old timers around the track on race day, though," said Cooper.

Thus, between what he may get from Schmeling and what he will not get from the boxing commission, the Herr Jake and his ensemble would seem due to sustain more of a pushing around than the average wheel chair.

So far as I know, there is no hint of dissonance in the happy menage of the Herr Schmeling at Endicott, N. Y. The Herr Jake may suspect that all is not well but he can't exorcise the Herr Schmeling for what he is thinking, which is supposed to be something in this vein: That a fighter's best friend is himself and, as such, ought to be rewarded very handsomely. He is said to regard 90 per cent of the purses as a reasonable arrangement, which is neither handsome nor good looking. It's downright beautiful.

The Senor Firpo made some arrangement of this kind seven years ago and seemed to find it satisfactory, although the managers always maintained that he needed a manager in a very critical way. They even say so to this day. In fact, the only man who they are certain doesn't need managing is an out and out failure.

Anyhow, if the Herr Jake is willing, he probably will be retained in some capacity. Somebody, for instance, has to answer the telephone. Besides, the Herr Jake is the Herr Schmeling's very good friend and he wouldn't think of parting with him—unless the Herr Jake gets so headstrong and unreasonable as to expect the manager's legal rate of 33 1-3 per cent.

Henry Joseph has assumed the Chairmanship for "National Jewish Hospital Week" in Circleville. Associated with Mr. Joseph are the following committee: W. G. Hamilton, Geo. F. Grand-Girard, Jos. M. Lynch and E. W. Lutz.

"National Jewish Hospital Week" will be held throughout the country from May 18 to 24. Its purpose is to acquaint the people of America with the free non-sectarian work of the National Jewish Hospital at Denver in the field of tuberculosis.

Its work is free and non-sectarian. No patient pays, and none who can afford to pay are admitted. Patients come from all parts of the country.

HENRY JOSEPH IS CHAIRMAN OF JEWISH HOSPITAL WEEK

"These patients represent every type of tuberculosis ailment, including diseases of the bones and joints, for which a special department is maintained at the hospital. A distinctive service is the work for children predisposed to tuberculosis."

In addition to offering every medical facility, the hospital maintains a special school for vocational training of the convalescent adult patients, and each child in the institution is given private instruction. Three hundred and twenty-five patients are now in the hospital. Of these, over twenty per cent are non-Jewish.

Necessary expansions in the Research Work of this hospital, and in its children's service, have greatly increased the expenditures, and since the hospital is supported entirely by individual contribution, special donations to make up the operation deficit for this year will be asked during "National Jewish Hospital Week." For this purpose, "NJH Bonds" will be distributed by the local committee. These Bonds are attractive souvenirs of this life-saving work and sell for a minimum of $1.00 each.

The Rev. and Mrs. L. W. Green of Circleville attended the funeral of her sister Miss Flora McCabe in Columbus Tuesday morning.

ATHLETES' GRAFT

An effort to "end graft in American sport" is the purpose of a conference called by the Federal Trade Commission. Representatives of 50 leading sport goods concerns have been invited.

The particular practice aimed at is that of inducing certain products for money or gifts. For the benefit of persons who do not know what form such graft takes, the commission has listed a few of the specific practices it regards as bad. They are:

"Giving athletic equipment to persons engaged in sport on condition they use only the equipment of the concern giving such goods, or recommend its equipment."

"Secretly paying or subsidizing athletes to use only the equipment of particular concerns."

"Advertising that winners of competitions used the goods of a particular concern without noting the obligation to use such equipment."

"Giving athletic equipment to those employed in positions of trust as instructors or advisors on condition that the goods be recommended by such persons."

"Use of names of prominent athletes on goods."

Such practices work unfairly against concerns not employing them. They even become a nuisance to the firms using them, but are hard to check once they have been started. If the commission can do anything to end the situation it will be a good thing for American sport.

TRAMPLED FEET

Suit for damages has been brought against an electric railway company in Baltimore because a woman's feet were trampled in a street car. She wants $10,000.

It was a newsboy who did the trampling. But it may not be literally true, as a dispatch states, that the company is sued for "permitting a newsboy to get aboard." Anybody might have stepped on the lady's feet. If the company, in self defense, forbids newsboys to ride, they, too, may bring suit against it.

It shows, again how subject corporations are to damage suits nowadays. Or individuals, for that matter. Almost anyone is liable at any time to be sued for almost anything in the way of harm or inconvenience that used to be taken as a matter of course.

The trolley company, to be sure, has an obvious remedy. It might operate enough street cars to avoid crowding. But trolley companies seldom do that. It pays to pack 'em in.

JAPANESE DEPRESSION

Americans who think business and employment in this country are in a bad way should take a look at Japan. That country was very prosperous for several years after the war, and much envied. Then came the tumble. Now, according to the head of labor department at Tokyo:

"There seems to be little hope of the present financial depression abating the near future. Industrial disputes are increasing at an alarming rate. Thousands of workers have been replaced by machines, thousands of others have lost their jobs through consolidation, and those remaining at work are threatened by the growing tendency to reduce wages."

There is a great deal of unemployment in America, too, resulting from lower demand for goods, consolidations and substitutions of machines for men. But we have virtually no labor disputes and very few wage reductions.

Our situation, no doubt, is much better fundamentally than Japan's. We seem to be a couple of jumps ahead of her in industrial development. Capital and labor understand each other better and work together better. It is generally held now by American business men that it doesn't pay to cut wages, because that deduces the buying power of consumers. There is more feeling of responsibility among employers for providing work. And the American temperament is more hopeful, nearly always expecting early improvement.

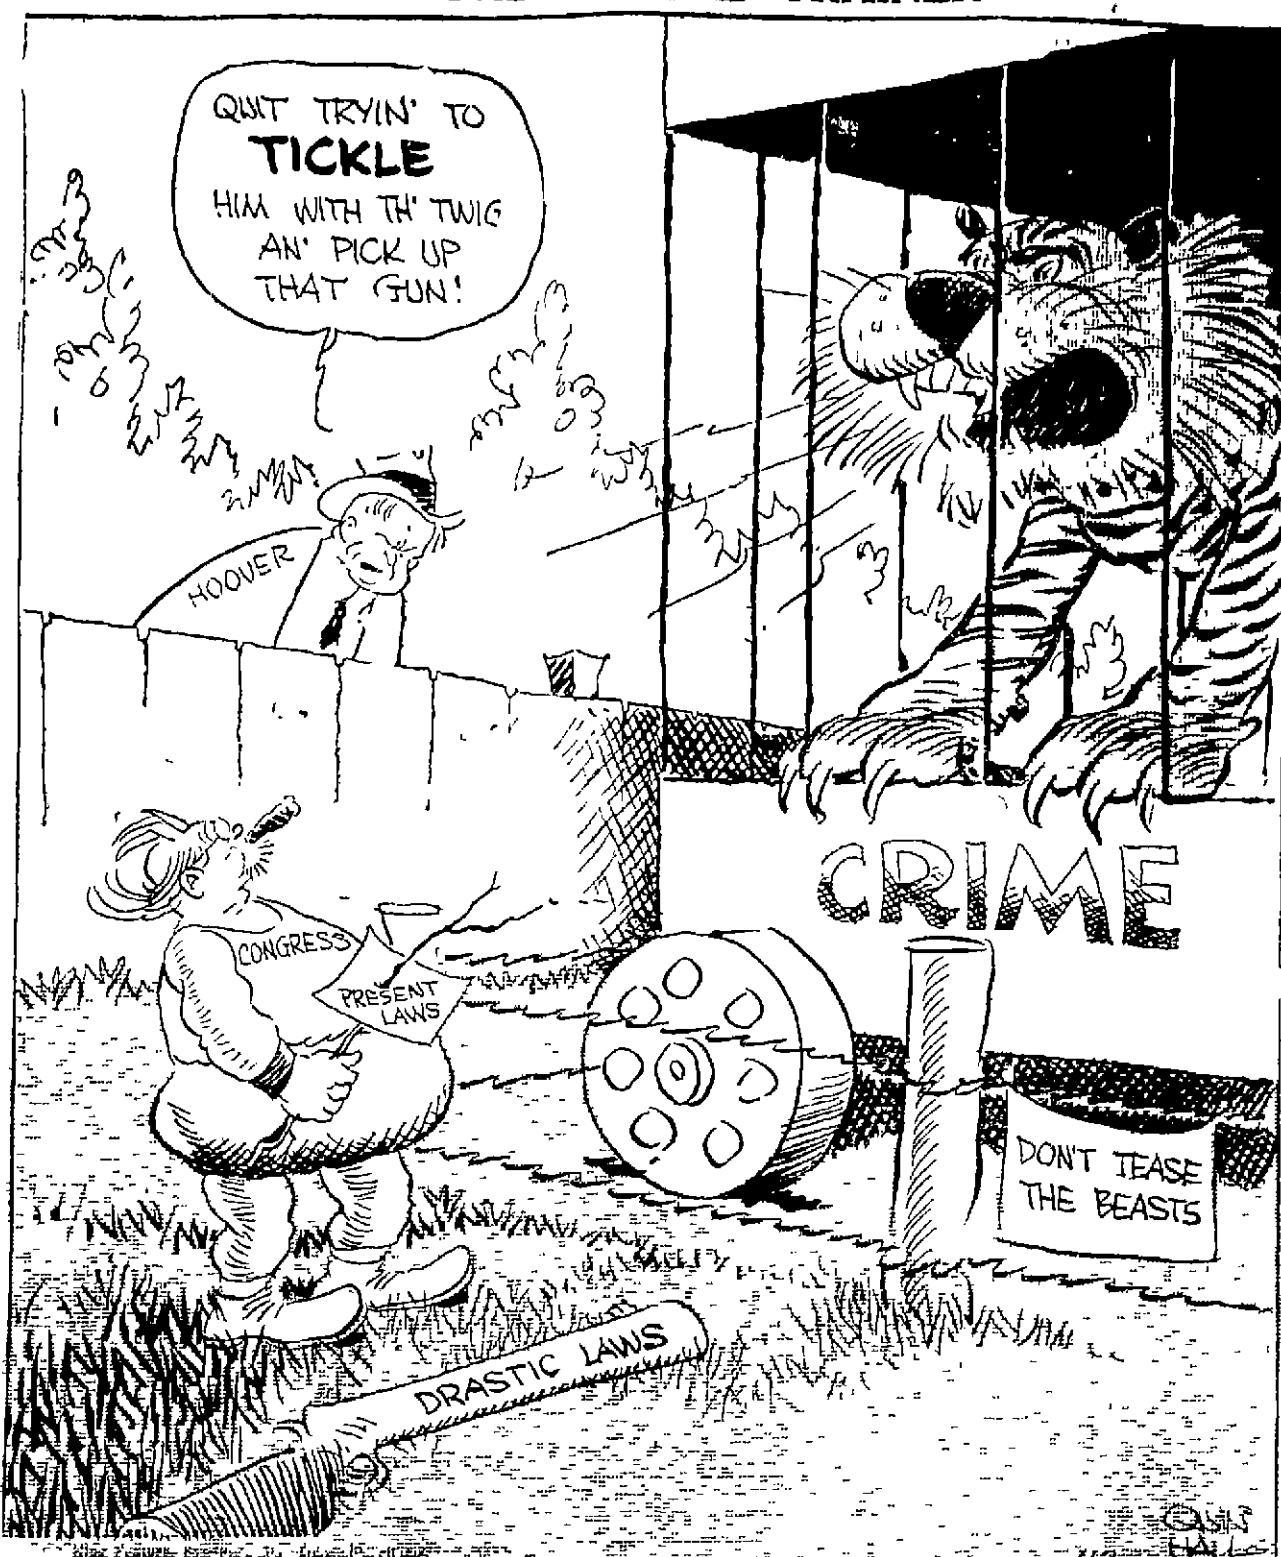

AIR MAIL COSTS

The federal air mail service has an appropriation this year of $19,000,000, of which the Postoffice Department only expects $7,000,000 to be returned by air mail postage. The total investment made by the government in this field is $30,000,000.

The expenditure is made, Postmaster-General Brown explains, to aid the aeronautical industry, expand national prosperity and insure national security.

"The government's ultimate objective is to develop a nation-wide press airlines, upon which the

"SHEIK'S WIFE"

BY WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER XXXVII

THERE was a bare little living room beyond the door, sparsely furnished with the flimsy odds and ends one finds in summer cottages rented by the season. The makeshiftness of the place struck Eve first of all, since quantities of cheap cushions, a soiled lamp shade and a mangy rug, all meant to impart an air of luxury, had hopelessly failed.

She stood in her dripping gown, peering through the dim light and made out the rumpled

far side of the room when Puss raised a disheveled head.

"What do you want?"

Eve giggled out of the slicker, letting it drop on the floor, tossed the tam-o-shanter on top of it, went over to the couch. She paused there looking down at the other girl, amazed and curiously distracted by the change in the little creature.

No fairy daintiness, no wondering childlikehood about her tonight.

The once delicate face was swollen and spotted with weeping, and

Eve soon saw with what had come out of the half empty whiskey bottle on the table near by. Her hair hung in damp, untidy strings

—even the curls had not been real!—and there were puffy rings under her eyes, lines etched about a sullen mouth. Puss was not the young thing she had pretended—easy enough to see that—she looked positively middle aged.

Stricken by shame as before an indignity, Eve turned her look away, all her resentment gone.

Shameful, pathetic—and this was the woman who had filled Ken's thought, lured him into strange flights of imagination!

"I've been looking for Ken,"

she said gently. "He's out somewhere—out in this terrible storm and I've been worried. I thought he might have stopped here."

"Well, he didn't," Puss said thickly, putting her head down and sending Eve a baleful glare.

"But, Puss—you haven't seen him? Not at all today? This storm—I can't help being frightened."

"Say, listen," Puss' voice was raucous, her soft sweetness gone

as if it never had been. "Listen.

You don't have to come here to tell me there's a storm. I've got ears, haven't I—and eyes—and nerves." She shrieked and buried her head as a particularly vicious streak of lightning cut through the stood up—say, I gotta have a drink—"

She motioned toward the bottle and Eve silently poured a little of the liquor into a glass and gave it to Puss, who drank it neat.

As if the whole sordid picture had been dabbed on dirty canvas,

Eve saw what had happened. This common little, siren, adventuring up and down, had followed Niel

Pierson to Spring Garden; there circumstances had made it possible for her to try her wiles on Keneth Wilmer, who had more to offer than Pierson provided he could be detached from his wife.

Puss had gone about the thing cleverly—not that much cleverness was needed to hypnotize Ken!

But just when things should have drawn to a climax Ken seemed to be slipping away. And then, in a flash, she was gone.

It was the idea that Puss had been clever enough to write such a success as the Revelations which won Ken; he had not been more than mildly interested in her

This fact stirred a possibility in Eve's mind—something she could not quite grasp. Exhausted by all she had been through she was half asleep now, drowsing over the wheel. Once she actually dropped off, bringing her head up with a start, as the car went over a rut.

Not a good thing to fall asleep on the road.

She pulled back the curtain, let the rain blow in her face to keep herself awake. And when finally she spied the chimneys of the Stewart house she made ready to turn from the state road and ran along to Stonywall—drove into the yard there.

The house was hot and stuffy

after coming in from the cool night, but Eve opened windows and doors. Almost before throwing herself down on a little bare cot brought from the attic she was asleep and she lay there all the rest of the night, her damp clothes, not stirring until a bird singing at the dawn awakened her to a world all newly washed and brightened under acts of golden sunlight.

if Eve hinted at the true state of people believe she had written the

ATHLETES' GRAFT

An effort to "end graft in American sport" is the purpose of a conference called by the Federal Trade Commission. Representatives of 50 leading sport goods concerns have been invited.

The particular practice aimed at is that indorsing certain products for money or gifts. For the benefit of persons who do not know what form such graft takes, the commission has listed a few of the specific practices it regards as bad. They are:

"Giving athletic equipment to persons engaged in sport on condition they use only the equipment of the concern giving such goods, or recommend its equipment;

"Secretly paying or subsidizing athletes to use only the equipment of particular concerns;

"Advertising that winners of competitions used the goods of a particular concern without noting the obligation to use such equipment;

"Giving athletic equipment to those employed in positions of trust as instructors or advisors on condition that the goods be recommended by such persons;

"Use of names of prominent athletes on goods."

Such practices work unfairly against concerns not employing them. They even become a nuisance to the firms using them, but are hard to check once they have been started. If the commission can do anything to end the situation it will be a good thing for American sport.

TRAMPLED FEET

Suit for damages has been brought against an electric railway company in Baltimore because a woman's feet were trampled in a street car. She wants $10,000.

It was a newsboy who did the trampling. But it may not be literally true, as a dispatch states, that the company is sued for "permitting a newsboy to get aboard." Anybody might have stepped on the lady's feet. If the company, in self defense, forbids newsboys to ride, they, too, may bring suit against it.

It shows again how subject corporations are to damage suits nowadays. Or individuals, for that matter. Almost anyone is liable at any time to be sued for almost anything in the way of harm or inconvenience that used to be taken as a matter of course.

The trolley company, to be sure, has an obvious remedy. It might operate enough street cars to avoid crowding. But trolley companies seldom do that. It pays to pack 'em in.

JAPANESE DEPRESSION

Americans who think business and employment in this country are in a bad way should take a look at Japan. That country was very prosperous for several years after the war, and much envied. Then came the tumble. Now, according to the head of labor department at Tokio:

"There seems to be little hope of the present financial depression abating the near future. Industrial disputes are increasing at an alarming rate. Thousands of workers have been replaced by machines, thousands of others have lost their jobs through consolidation, and those remaining at work are threatened by the growing tendency to reduce wages."

There is a great deal of unemployment in America, too, resulting from lower demand for goods, consolidations and substitutions of machines for men. But we have virtually no labor disputes and very few wage reductions.

Our situation, no doubt, is much better fundamentally than Japan's. We seem to be a couple of jumps ahead of her in industrial development. Capital and labor understand each other better and work together better. It is generally held now by American business men that it doesn't pay to cut wages, because that deduces the buying power of consumers. There is more feeling of responsibility among employers for providing work. And the American temperament is more hopeful, nearly always expecting early improvement.

AIR MAIL COSTS

The federal air mail service has an appropriation this year of $19,000,000, of which the Postoffice Department only expects $7,000,000 to be returned by air mail postage. The total investment made by the government in this field is $30,000,000.

The expenditure is made, Postmaster-General Brown explains, to aid the aeronautical industry, expand national prosperity and insure national security.

"The government's ultimate objective is to develop a nationwide press airlines, upon which the

CHAPTER XXXVII.

THERE was a bare little living room beyond the door, sparsely furnished with the flimsy odds and ends one finds in summer cottages rented by the season. The makeshiftness of the place struck Eve first of all, since quantities of cheap cushions, a soiled lamp shade and a mangy rug, all meant to impart an air of luxury, had hopelessly failed.

She stood in her dripping garments peering through the dim light and made out the rumpled little figure on the couch at the far side of the room when Puss raised a disheveled head.

"Wh—what do you want?" Eve giggled out of the slicker, letting it drop on the floor, tossed the tam-o-shanter on top of it, went over to the couch.

She paused there looking down at the other girl, amazed and curiously distressed by the change in the little creature.

No fairy daintiness, no wondering childlikeness about her tonight. The once delicate face was swollen and spotted with weeping and, Eve soon saw, with what had come out of the half empty whiskey bottle on the table near by. Her hair hung in damp, untidy strings—even the curls had not been real—and there were puffy rings under her eyes, lines etched about a sullen mouth. Puss was not the young thing she had pretended—easy enough to see that—she looked positively middle aged.

Stricken by shame as before an indignity, Eve turned her look away, all her resentment gone. Shameful, pathetic—and this was the woman who had filled Ken's thought, lured him into strange flights of imagination!

"I've been looking for Ken," she said gently. "He's out somewhere—out in this terrible storm—and I've been worried. I thought he might have stopped here."

"Well, he didn't," Puss said thickly, putting her head down and sending Eve a baleful glare.

"But, Puss—you haven't seen him? Not at all today? This storm—can't help being frightened—"

"Say, listen," Puss' voice was raucous, her soft wildness gone as if it never had been. "Listen. You don't have to come here to tell me there's a storm. I've got ears, haven't I—and eyes—and nerves." She shrieked and buried her head as a particularly vicious streak of lightning cut through the night.

"Guess if anybody's got a right to be scared it's me—me all alone in this dam' dump." She began to sob, chattering incoherently, the last shreds of refinement vanished. "Yeh, what do you know about me for a sap, leavin' Broadway for this! Me with guys buzzin' around thick as flies always waitin' to take me swell places—none of your cheap neckin' on dark roads for them babes; they know what a girl like me oughta have—night, clubs, lights, whoopee—they're spenders, they are. Think they'd go 'round standin' a girl up, chasin' regular fellas away—there's Niel Pierson, he's regular all right—and where is he? I ask you. Me hangin' here like a prize Dumb Dora givin' Niel the gate and then gettin'—" panic over the belief that she had lost Pierson as well as Ken, Puss had drunk herself into hysteria and now lay there disclosing her campaign to the enemy, as it were.

Tomorrow she again would be the sweet, simple child—take on the fairy mask to hide a calculating ruthlessness hard as nails.

Tomorrow she would be in a frenzy over what she had said tonight if she remembered it—which seemed unlikely for now she was falling into a stupor of sleep.

Eve wanted to get away. Her fears for Ken were gone; always she was fretting over him, looking upon him as a child and all at once this seemed ridiculous.

Rain beat steadily upon the cottage but the fury of the storm was past and Eve wanted to get out into the rain, to let it wash away the soil she had gathered here.

Puss was breathing heavily; there seemed no use trying to awaken her. So Eve put on the slicker and the tam and drove stood up—say, I gotta have a drink—"

She motioned toward the bottle and Eve silently poured a little of the liquor into a glass and gave it to Puss, who drank it neat.

As if the whole sordid picture had been daubed on dirty canvas, Eve saw what had happened. This common little siren, adventuring up and down, had followed Niel Pierson to Spring Garden; there circumstances had made it possible for her to try her wiles on Kenneth Wilmer, who had more to offer than Pierson provided he could be detached from his wife.

Puss had gone about the thing cleverly—not that much cleverness was needed to hypnotize Ken—but just when things should have drawn to a climax Ken seemed to be slipping away. And then, in a do. If only Ken could see Puss as she was! But Puss would not be caught that way by him and if Eve hinted at the true state of conditions Ken would fly to the girl's defense. Already Eve had said too much about Puss letting people believe she had written the Revelations. Ken had championed her against all insinuations and of course a man felt tenderness for what he defended.

It was the idea that Puss had been clever enough to write such a success as the Revelations which won Ken; he had not been more than mildly interested in her before.

This fact stirred a possibility in Eve's mind—something she could not quite grasp. Exhausted by all she had been through she was half asleep now, drowsing over the wheel. Once she actually dropped off, bringing her head up with a jerk as the car went over a rut. Not a good thing to fall asleep on the road.

"What do you know about me for a sap, leaving Broadway for this?"

She pulled back the curtain, let the rain blow in her face to keep herself awake. And when finally she spied the chimneys of the Stewart house she made ready to turn from the state road and ran along to Stonywall—drove into the yard there.

The house was hot and stuffy after coming in from the cool night, but Eve opened windows and doors. Almost before throwing herself down on a little bare cot brought from the attic she was asleep and she lay there all the rest of the night in her damp clothes, not stirring until a bird singing at the eaves awakened her to a world all newly washed and brightened under sheets of golden sunlight.

Naturally the business man mailing first-class matter weighing more than one ounce divides it into two or more letters, paying only five cents an ounce for everything, but making more trouble for himself and the postoffice than would be made by a straight five-cent rate.

Even so, the government might cut down its temporary losses by shrewder adjustment of letter postage. The present plan seems curious. The sender of a letter pays five cents for the first ounce and 10 cents for each additional ounce.

transportation of the mails will perhaps be only an incidental operation."

It is easily worth a few millions Uncle Sam spends on the enterprise. Far more money has been spent, many a time, to encourage less promising and useful industries.

Daily Care of Baby's Skin

Bathing an Infant is an Art, Says Authority, and How It's Done Has a Bearing on Future Health.

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health
New York City.

BATHING the baby is one of the many important proceedings in infant hygiene. To do it correctly is a real art.

Most mothers go about it with the greatest confidence. Many another, particularly the young mother, starts in with fear and trembling. She is fearful lest she may let the tiny thing fall, or some other accident happen to it.

There is no care too great for the little, helpless babies given us in trust. It is this protecting care that guarantees good health in future years.

The skin of a newly-born baby is extremely sensitive. The slightest heat or cold is felt by the tender skin. It is chilled by the slightest exposure.

At first, bathing of the infant should be done by the nurse. She takes the child on her lap, and after sponging and soaping the skin the baby is gently dipped into the tub for no more than a mere rinsing.

After a few days of this method the infant can be gradually accustomed to immersion to the neck. The period of bathing is extended gradually.

Cold baths should never be given an infant. The bath is best given midway between the morning feedings. It is important that a pure, mild soap be used. If it is too strong the tender skin will be irritated. Pure white castile, or olive oil soap, is best for the baby.

After bathing, the skin should be thoroughly dried. There is danger of the skin chapping unless this is done. A baby powder is used, usually, in order to make sure of making the skin perfectly dry. This keeps the skin from chafing. It is extremely important that a child shall not be left in wet garments. If it is, there will be chafing and chapping of the skin and much discomfort. Wet clothing should be changed at once.

A healthy baby should have a daily bath during the first two years. The scalp should be washed daily only until the child is six months old. In hot weather, a baby may be sponged off in the early evening. This will be cooling and soothing.

Petroleum oil is often used for the skin of the body, but not for the face. It is soothing and protective at the same time.

If a rash should appear on the baby's skin it may be due to the wearing of too much clothing. The baby will perspire freely, and then the rash appears. Or a skin irritation may result from wrong feeding. The milk mixture may not be quite right. It may be well to make a change in the milk supply. Your doctor can pass judgment upon this question.

Every baby is better off if it has a room set apart from the rest of the family. It should sleep alone in a bed, and in fact all through childhood it should sleep by itself.

The temperature of such a room should be between 63 degrees and 70 degrees F., and not over 72 degrees. At night it should not fall below 65 degrees during the baby's first year.

A clean, sweetly smiling baby is the most appealing thing in the world. This should be every child's heritage. A perfect skin usually denotes good health and a well baby is apt to be a happy baby.

Theatres

AT THE METROPOLITAN

Constance Bennett has two leading men in "Rich People," her first Pathe talking picture which is at the Metropolitan theatre. These fortunate gentlemen are Regis Toomey, who was borrowed from Paramount, and Robert Ames, who did not even have to move his makeup kit to play the part, since he had just completed the leading male role in Gloria Swanson's latest picture filmed on the Pathe lot.

Regis Toomey's success in "Alibi" brought him a long-term contract with Paramount and he appeared in a featured part in "Ilusion" for the company. His coming to Pathe for "Rich People" was something in the nature of a trade for Pathe loaned Stanley Smith, one of its most prominent young players to Paramount to appear opposite Nancy Carroll in "Sweetie."

Edward H. Griffith directed "Rich People" and the cast includes Mahlon Hamilton, John Loder, Ilka Chase and others. A. A. Kline has made the adaptations from Jan Gelzer's popular novel and Ralph Block was the supervisor.

AT THE GRAND

The famous "Kinkajou" stomped into town when "Rio Rita," the all-talking all-musical film extravaganza Radio Pictures made from the Ziegfeld show opened at the Grand theatre.

The "Kinkajou" is but one of the numerous dances that feature the brilliant show, which played for 62 weeks on Broadway and for extended runs elsewhere throughout the country.

Bebe Daniels and John Boles head the largest cast of stage and screen favorites who transferred the songs and comedy of the stage hit to the screen. Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey play their original comedy roles. Dorothy Lee, the "Syncopeation" girl; Helen Kaiser, former "glorified" girl of the "Follies," Georges Renevant, French stage star; Don Alvarado; Eva Rosita, Mexican dancer, and Nick de Ruiz, former Grand Opera Company, are among the featured players.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Two of the principals in "Be Yourself," the United Artists all-sound, musical and dramatic picture now showing at the Cliftona theatre, were former lawyers, who turned to the stage because the future promised them greater wealth. Robert Armstrong, Fannie Brice's leading man in this lively story of the midnight cabarets and the prizing, is a graduate of the law school of Washington University. Harry Green, who portrays a fledgling lawyer, was similarly graduated from New York University.

By a strange coincidence, both men used the stage to pay their way through school. In Armstrong's case, he wrote a school play which was so successful that he turned the country with it for three years. Green made his theatrical debut singing between reel changes in the old-fashioned nickelodeons of twenty years ago.

"Be Yourself," which stars Miss Brice in a lively musical story, is an excellent vehicle for the noted vaudeville and revue artist, who sings six songs in the picture.

Others in the cast are Gertrude Egan, G. Pat Collins, the New York actor, Budd Fine and fourteen-year-old Jimmy Tolson, who makes his screen debut as a singer of "blues" songs.

Thornton Freeland, whose first all-talking picture, "Three Live Ghosts," earned his stellar recognition as a director of comedy, headed the megaphone staff during the filming of "Be Yourself."

DRY WEATHER AIDS INSECTS

The dry weather which Pickaway-co farmers have experienced in the last month has been decidedly in favor of the insect enemies of our different truck crops. Melons, cucumbers and potatoes, particularly are in a position to be seriously attacked unless the precaution of prevention is taken by the growers. For potatoes, the most effective control measure is a liquid spray applied under a pressure of from 350 to 400 pounds, using bordeaux 4-6-50 mixture and where the flea beetle is bad, the addition of Calcium Arsenate at the rate of 2 pounds to each 50 gallons of spray. On small potato acreage, the dust measure of control may be obtained through the use of 12 1-2 pounds of Monodehydrated Copper Sulphate to each 50 pounds of high grade Hydrated Lime.

Melons and Cucumbers: The striped melon or cucumber bugs are now drawing up their line of attack for the appearance of both melon and cucumber plants. The moment that the small plants show their heads, it is time to begin using a dust prepared through the use of 20 pounds of Gypsum and one pound Calcium Arsenate. These dusts should be kept on the melon and cucumber crop consistently. When the permanent leaves have developed and the vines begin to fall over, a Copper lime dust should be used at the rate of 12 1-2 pounds of Mono dehydrated Copper Sulphate to 70 pounds of high grade Hydrated lime. In cases of leaf eating insects, Calcium Arsenate should be added to this dust at the rate of 2 1-2 pounds. Insect control in the production of truck crops is most essential to economic results not only attack the foliage, turns since the most common insect also communicate harmful fungi diseases which exact annually a heavy toll from the truck growers.

Announce of prevention in the production of these crops through the control of the insect enemies have proven the difference between crop failures and economic crop returns. Dusts should be applied only in the morning or late in the evening to make the applications more thorough. Liquid sprays may be applied at the convenience of the Grower.

LOOKING AHEAD

Clairvoyancy is decidedly not up our alley, but as we sit here wishing it were time to go out and enjoy some of this grand May weather, a very strange thing occurs to us. We suddenly acquire the ability to see into the future. It certainly is a swell feeling.

And, to our way of thinking, a swell sight. For example, we see Chas Brooks sleeping over time in the morning on a new Restwell Mattress; we witness Mrs. John Wright spending hot summer mornings on the front porch while her new Estate Range tends the baking; and would you believe it here is Mrs. Ammer telling Mrs. Taylor what a great ice save, the new refrigerator is.

We pause momentarily to notice if you have noticed anything about these manifestations? Have you noticed that all the items mentioned were by old coincidence, purchased at our store? That they were performing their duties in a satisfactory manner?

Unfortunately, we cannot feel quite depressed. It's that "dainty quality" of the quality of standard merchandise that can't be put in a word to act, and what you can expect from it. Every purchaser has their own clairvoyant prediction, a sure thing. Pshaw! A prettiness to our notion, we're not so sure after all.

This morning we passed the Ward residence, and there was Ralph muttering to himself, and looking like Al Johnson going into a Mammy song. A casual inquiry revealed the fact that Ralph had neglected procrastination in taking down the old stove, and was now persuading it to send the summer in the attic. Judging from the remarks, Wardy is already a prospect for a Heatrola when the Coal rolls around.

Which by the way, is something a number of folks to think about. We will see them later and tell our story. And what a story it is, too.

As June—the month for brides—is in the offing, we hasten to confess that some splendid suggestions for wedding gifts will be found at our store.

Have you heard about the newlywed who cried all day because at breakfast one morning her husband set the coffee pot down on one of her waffles thinking it was an asbestos pad?

Teacher: "What is the Order of Bath?" Johnny: "Tommy comes first, then Willie and then the baby."

Of course if your linoleum is of the Armstrong Quaker variety, you won't have to worry about things like that. New patterns are in.

Employment Office: "A floor walker, eh? Any experience?" Applicant: "Sure, three children."

Mrs. C. G. Come N. Court-st. had trouble in finding a satisfactory linoleum. One day, while talking to her neighbor, Mrs. Samuel Kinder she was informed that the varnish sold by us was very satisfactory. So she sent her husband, Dr. G. S. Come, to our store. Doc asked for the same brand of varnish that we sold to Mrs. Kinder. Saturday morning, Doc met H. G. on the street and told him that Mrs. Come was well pleased with the results secured by using our brand of Linoleum Varnish. If you have been having trouble in finding a varnish for your linoleum, why not try the kind that we sell? We also keep in stock Armstrong's Linoleum Lacquer. By using either of these "surface savers" the pattern on your painted linoleum will last much longer. On mild linoleum, you'll find that the job of keeping it clean will be much easier.

LOOKING AHEAD

Clairvoyancy is decidedly not up our alley, but as we sit here wishing it were time to go out and enjoy some of this grand May weather, a very strange thing occurs to us. We suddenly acquire the ability to see into the future. It certainly is a swell feeling.

And, to our way of thinking, a swell sight. For example, we see Chas. Brooks sleeping over time in the morning on a new Restwell Mattress; we witness Mrs. John Wright spending hot summer mornings on the front porch while her new Estate Range tends the baking; and, would you believe it, here is Mrs. Annmer telling Mrs. Tiller what a great ice saver the Gibson Refrigerator is.

We pause momentarily to inquire if you have noticed anything peculiar about these manifestations? Have you noticed that all the items mentioned were, by odd coincidence, purchased at our store? That they were performing their duties in a satisfactory manner?

Unfortunately, we notice it, and we feel quite depressed. It's that old "quality" again. The quality of standard merchandise. You can forget just how it's going to act, and what you can expect from it. Every purchaser his, or her, own clairvoyant—predicting a sure thing. Pshaw! A pretty pass to our notion; we're not so psychic, after all.

This morning we passed the Ward residence, and there was Ralph muttering to himself, and looking like Al Jolson going into a Mammy song. A casual inquiry revealed the fact that Ralph had practised procrastination in taking down the old stove, and was now persuading it to spend the summer in the attic. Judging from his remarks, Wardy is already a hot prospect for a Heatrola when Free Coal rolls around.

Which by the way, is something for a number of folks to think about. We will see them later and tell our story. And what a story it is, too.

As June—the month for brides—is in the offing, we hasten to confess that some splendid suggestions for wedding gifts will be found at our store.

Have you heard about the newly-wed who cried all day because at breakfast one morning her husband set the coffee pot down on one of her waffles thinking it was an asbestos pad?

Teacher: "What is the Order of Bath?"
Johnny: "Tommy comes first, then Willie and then the baby."

Of course, if your linoleum is of the Armstrong Quaker variety, you won't have to worry about things like that. New patterns are in.

Employment Office: "A floor walker, eh? Any experience?"
Applicant: "Sure, three children"

Mrs. Geo. S. Corne, N. Court-st., had trouble in finding a satisfactory linoleum varnish. One day, while talking to her neighbor, Mrs. Samuel Kinder, she was informed that the varnish sold by us was very satisfactory. So, she sent her husband, Dr. G. S. Corne, to our store. Doc asked for the same brand of varnish that we sold to Mrs. Kinder. Saturday morning, Doc Met H. G. on the street and told him that Mrs. Corne was well pleased with the results secured by using our brand of Linoleum Varnish. If you have been having trouble in finding a varnish for your linoleum, why not try the kind that we sell? We also keep in stock Armstrong's Linoleum Lacquer. By using either of these "surface savers" the pattern on your printed linoleum will last much longer. On inlaid linoleum, you'll find that the job of keeping it clean will be much easier.
